GENEALOGY

OF THE FAMILY OF

GEORGE MARSH

Who came from England in 1635

AND SETTLED IN

HINCHAM, MASS.

BY E. J. MARSH.

PRESS OF F. N. BOUTWELL

DEDICATED TO THE Descendants of George Marsh.

P R E F A C E .

The desire to know something of one's ancestors is natural, if not laudable. There is a silent but powerful influence descending from father to son through long series of generations. By tracing this influence we may generally discover what the prevailing trait of character in a family is.

It may be very pleasing to one to know that he belongs to a royal family, or that his ancestors are of the nobility, but many a man in the humbler walks of life possesses traits of character that nobles and kings might envy. There are whole families whose history shows a purity of life, a nobleness of character, that no one can fail to admire.

Such and similar thoughts many years ago led me to make what inquiries I could respecting the history of my ancestors. Believing the tradition everywhere prevalent, "that all the Marshes in the country were descended from three brothers who came from England in the early part of the 17th century," I began by tracing, as fully as I could, the ancestry of every one of that name whom I met. The result was that this whole tradition proved a myth, for which there was not the least foundation, as the following facts will show; and how it should ever have originated it is difficult to see.

John Marsh, who came from England in 1633, landing at Salem, was probably the first of this name who came to this country. He settled in Salem and married Susannah, daughter of Rev. Samuel Skelton, the first minister of Salem, in 1639, and had eleven children.

His descendants are now settled over the whole country—some are still living in the neighborhood of Salem, and some in Boston, while others have gone West. It is hoped that their family history will be written in full. It has shown itself a family of which any one may be proud.

In 1635, two years later, six others came over.

1. John Marsh, aged 26, embarked on board the Plain Joan, Richard Buckner, master, for Virginia, which then included New England.
2. Another of the same name born in 1618.
3. Jonathan.
4. Francis.
5. George, who settled in Hingham, and
6. Alexander Marsh, supposed to have been a nephew of George, and to have come over with him, as he was but seven years old at the time, and settled near by him in Braintree, now Quincy, where he afterwards married Mary French, and from them have descended a noble family whose history is full of interest and should be published. He died in 1698, aged 70.

In 1636 a fourth John came to this country and settled in Hartford, Conn. His descendants are sometimes called the Connecticut River Marshes, and their history, I am happy to know, is soon to be given to the world.

In 1642 James Marsh of Kent was Captain against Cromwell, and when Cromwell became victorious at Edgehill Captain James was beheaded, and his sisters fearing for a younger brother, William, who was in College, lest he should be beheaded, called him home and sent him, with his two nephews, sons of a half sister, to this country. They landed at Salem, but William afterwards went to Boston. He was Commissary in the old Indian War and was badly wounded in the Narragansett fight at Stonington, Conn. He afterwards married Elizabeth Yomans of Stonington and moved to Plainfield, Conn. I would gladly trace his history more fully, but must leave it to others.

In 1645 Thomas Marsh came to this country. He had received an order from the English Court for a lot of land wherever he could find it, for which he paid £33 6s.

In 1648 Samuel Marsh came from England and settled in New Haven, Conn., but afterwards moved to New Jersey.

In 1674 Henry Marsh received grants of land in Dover. Peter Marsh and his brothers Richard and Thomas came to this country previous to the Revolutionary War. He settled in Sussex Co., Delaware, Richard in Pennsylvania, and Thomas in New York.

Sometime previous to 1763 another John Marsh came over in a vessel with Capt. Nevins and settled in Portsmouth, N. H. There was a John Marsh settled in Medfield about 1700, another in Mendon, and an Asa Marsh who settled in Douglas. These all may have come from England, but of this I have no certainty.

Since that time they have continued to come, quite a number of whom it has been my privilege to meet.

This then settles the question of all the Marshes in this country being descended from three brothers this side the water. Still it is by no means improbable that they all belonged to one family in England, and were descended from one Marisco who moved from France to England.

But whatever their origin or relationship their history for the past two hundred and fifty years has shown them to be a truly Puritan family, everywhere distinguished for their marked uprightness and integrity.

But our present business is to trace the genealogy, and incidentally the history, of George Marsh of Hingham and his descendants.

It would be very pleasant to be able to furnish the record complete in every respect, and free from all errors, but that is an impossibility. With respect to accuracy of names and dates a great amount of labor has been given to secure it, and it is hoped not in vain. Difficulties not a few are met in seeking perfect accuracy. Sometimes original records are at fault, because those of the town, church and family do not always agree and it is difficult to decide which is right. Again it is frequently a matter of doubt whether the letter b. stands for birth or baptism. Mistakes are not unfrequently made by those who send in the information. These mistakes would often make an amusing page to read. It would be a very strange circumstance too, if the compiler, copying thousands of dates and names, should never make a mistake, and even the printer cannot always claim exemption. But all errors which have been discovered, arising from whatever cause, will be found corrected in the Appendix.

I wish to express my thanks to all who have in any way aided in preparing this book, and my especial obligations to those who have shown so deep an interest in the work as to give valuable time in searching out and furnishing me with important information, working faithfully for many years, without whose help I could never have accomplished the work.

At the head of each family I have given their ancestry back to our common ancestor, so that any one can readily trace his relation to any other member, thereby saving the need of a chart.

The Index is four-fold, embracing

First, the names of all the sons born in the family.

Second, the names of all the daughters born in the family.

Third, the names of the gentlemen married into the family.

Fourth, the names of all the ladies married into the family.

Following the Index, the Appendix consists of two parts :

First, the Errata discovered after the manuscript had been given to the printer, and Second, the Addenda containing such additional information as was received too late for the body of the work.

Where the name of the State is not given Massachusetts is to be understood.

Any important information concerning those whose history is but partially given here or entirely left out, will be gratefully received by the compiler.

E. J. MARSH.

GEORGE MARSH

And his wife Elizabeth, with their four children, in company with twenty other families, including their pastor Rev. Peter Hobart and family, most of whom were from Hingham, Norfolk Co., England, left their homes in the Spring of 1635 to make for themselves a home in this New World, where they could enjoy freedom to worship God according to their own conscience more fully than they were allowed to do in England, and landed at Charlestown June 8th. But Rev. Peter Hobart says in his journal that they arrived in the harbor on the 4th.

From Charlestown they proceeded to Hingham, about fourteen miles southeast of Boston, so named from the town from which most of them came.

On the 18th of September following they cast lots for house lots and the following is the record of

GEORGE MARSH'S DEED.

"Given unto George Marsh, for a houselot, five acres of land, bounded with the land of Richard Osborn eastward, and with the highway leading to Squirrell Hill westward, butting upon the Common northward, and upon the Town Street southward."

The following year, March 3, 1636, he was made freeman. On the 2d of July, 1647, he died leaving a wife and four children, as appears from his will made the same day.

He resided in Hingham awhile, taking the freeman's oath in 1672, but removed to Haverhill about 1674, where, having purchased a lot of land, he built a house which his descendants have continued to occupy until the present time.

There was also a garrison built upon his farm which he and his son Onesiphorus, with five others, guarded during the Indian troubles of 1690.

In 1687, when the notorious Andrew, whom the despotic king of Great Britain, James II, had sent over as Governor, ordered an oppressive tax to be levied on the inhabitants, a few other towns showing their hands openly against the assessment, Onesiphorus having been appointed constable declined to use his official authority to sanction the tax, and Andrew, in resentment of his course, fined him £5 6s.

Hannah, his wife, d. March 17, 1686, and he was again married Oct. 29, 1686, to Elizabeth, widow of Samuel Worcester of Bradford, who was son of Rev. Samuel Worcester of Salisbury. She d. 15. THOMAS OF THOMAS OF THOMAS OF THOMAS OF GEORGE

Was a graduate of Harvard College in 1731, and was appointed Librarian of the College from 1737 to 1741. In 1741 he received a unanimous call from the church in Rutland to become their pastor, but he preferred to accept the call given him at the same time to become tutor in Harvard College, which office he held until 1766, when, having been married, Jan. 9, to Hannah Sprague, he was required, by the rules of the Institution, to retire from the office of tutor, as these rules require a tutor to reside in the college building night and day. Therefore to get married was to resign his office. But he was allowed to retain it until the semi-annual meeting of the Corporation, when he received from them high commendations for the faithful discharge of his duties.

Having no children he gave all his property to his wife, and after her death it was to go to his nephew John, (son of his brother John,) who was living with him at the time.

40. SAMUEL OF ONESIPHORUS OF ONESIPHORUS OF ONESIPHORUS OF ONESIPHORUS OF GEORGE

Went from Hollis, N. H., to Plymouth, N. H., at the age of nineteen with his father. He served as a volunteer in the Revolutionary War, and returning home after the expiration of his term of service, and learning that his father had been drafted, he volunteered to take his place. Their nearest trading post was Concord, N. H. They would fatten a hog, and when the cold weather came would kill it and put it upon a hand-sled and haul it to Concord and buy their supplies for the family. One year a bear killed the hog intended for the market and the family had to do with less. They used to save their corn cobs and burn them in the oven, then take the ashes and make lye of them which they used instead of soda.

Betsey had continued to reside with her parents, being frequently visited by her husband, whose business was in another place, but after about two years, having provided a home for his wife and child, he told her he would come and take her to their new home. When she informed her parents of this, her father became excited and told her that she could do as she pleased, she could have a good home for herself and children with him as long as she was disposed to stay, but if she chose to leave she could never come back. This was a short time previous to the birth of her second child. The day arrived and her husband came with his team to take her home with him, but she declined to go. The consequence was that he gave up his business and left the state, and thay never heard from him afterwards.

59. DANIEL OF EPHRAIM OF EPHRAIM OF JOHN OF ONESIPHORUS OF GEORGE

Born in Londonderry, N. H., at the age of sixteen enlisted in the Revolutionary Army, but being below the required size he was rejected as a soldier. Still the spirit of patriotism or adventure was stronger than parental authority or army regulations, and he succeeded finally in being admitted into the ranks of Army Officers' Assistants, in which capacity he served during the remainder of the war under Gen. McDougal, and for one winter as steward in Gen. Washington's family, where he was delighted to assist Mrs. Washington in her domestic affairs.

He sometimes related the anecdote, that every cake that got broken was given to him, and he sometimes thought the good hearted lady broke them purposely.

About the year 1791, he, in company with several others, went to seek their fortunes in the wilderness of New Hampshire, and located on Derry Hill, Walpole, so called from the place whence most of the settlers came. Here he cleared the forests and built a house, and at the end of three years returned to Derry for his bride, Miss Jane Adams of Newburyport, the daughter of Dea. Edmund and Hannah Adams, a man of ability and fortune, and cousin of President John Quincy Adams, and a family well known for their scholarly attainments. She was b. Feb. 13, 1773, and married Dec. 31, 1794. Married Aurelia, daughter of Ichabod and Melitabel (Kimball) Gould of Hopkinton N. H., Jan. 27, 1825. She was b. Sept. 3, 1798.

His was one of the New England families that left their homes in 1833 to establish Oberlin College. "At the time of their arrival at the place," says one of the family, "we found but three log houses, and one frame partly inclosed." Oberlin was started in the midst of a dense forest, the nearest store being eight miles distant, and that only a log cabin. There were no roads and men had to find their way by blazing trees as they went along. But they joyfully endured all the hardships incident to pioneer life that they might help to build up a school where both sexes might be educated together. They remained there until the College and town were in a prosperous condition. In 1854 they started west, stopping at Tipton, Iowa. 128. ELIEZER JEWETT OF JAMES OF EPHRAIM OF EPHRAIM OF JOHN OF ONESIPHORUS OF GEORGE

Was graduated at Middlebury College in 1833. Immediately after leaving College he took charge of the Academy in Jericho, Vt., where he remained two years. In 1835 he went to Andover Seminary, but at the end of five months he was prostrated by sickness, which so affected his lungs as to take away all hope of his ever being able to preach. In the autumn of 1836 he took charge of the High School in Concord for a year, at the end of which time, the climate proving unfavorable, he accepted a call to take charge of the Academy at Thetford, Vt. Three years later he was called to the Academy in Milton. This was in 1840. Seven years later he went to Groton and became assistant teacher in Lawrence Academy with his old classmate Rev. James Means as Principal. He remained in Groton between eight and nine years, until his health broke down and he was compelled to give up teaching altogether. And here it may not perhaps be inappropriate to introduce some testimony as to his success as a teacher.

Dr. Bates, President of Middlebury College, writes: "Mr. Marsh held a high rank in College as a scholar, and as a man of judgment and energy. He is among the most accurate scholars in his class and is sound in every department."

Rev. Samuel W. Cozzens, a trustee of Milton Academy, writes: "Mr. Marsh has been a highly approved teacher for many years. He came to our Academy highly recommended as a gentleman, a scholar and a christian. Such a reputation he now sustains. I regard him as a superior teacher."

Rev. Mr. Gordon, who succeeded Rev. Mr. Means as Principal of the Academy, writes: "I hesitate not to say that as an instructor he is not excelled by any one with whom it has been my fortune to be acquainted."

At the close of his teaching at Lawrence Academy, George F. Farley, Esq., a prominent lawyer and trustee of the Academy, writes: "Mr. E. J. Marsh has been First Assistant Teacher in Lawrence Academy for more than eight years, and during the whole of that period has commended himself by his skill and fidelity to the entire approbation of the trustees and friends of the institution. He has been uniformly and eminently successful as a teacher in the departments in which he has been engaged, and justly entitled to a high recommendation."

He had the satisfaction of training over four hundred to be teachers, and fitting a hundred for college, and no one recommended by him failed to be admitted without "conditions" to any college to which he was recommended.

He was married Aug. 28, 1838, to Martha, daughter of Jacob and Lavinia (Minot) Baker of Lincoln. She was b. in Waltham, March 14, 1817.
